Updated: New and improved code can be found at PowerPoint -> PDF (Part 2). I like to write talks in PowerPoint, because it has a nice interface and is a lot faster to work with for diagrams than Latex. I hope one day to move to using Google's online presentation creation tool, but there is one crucial feature missing that stops me - creating PDF's.

An access network is a type of telecommunications network which connects subscribers to their immediate service provider. It is contrasted with the core network, (for example the Network Switching Subsystem in GSM) which connects local providers to one another. The access network may be further divided between feeder plant or distribution network, and drop plant or edge network.
